Must try FOOD

Scouse

A type of stew typically made from meat (usually beef or lamb) with potatoes, carrots, and onions; it is particularly associated with the city of Liverpool, to the extent that the Liverpool accent is also widely referred to as “Scouse” and locals as “Scousers”; it is similar to Irish stew or Lancashire hotpot, though generally using beef rather than lamb.

Wet Nelly

A traditional, thrifty bread pudding from Liverpool, made from stale bread, milk, sugar, eggs, butter, dried fruit and spices; it was created to use up leftover scraps during times of poverty and rationing; it was historically called the “Dockers’ Wedding Cake” because working-class families used it as an affordable celebration cake.

Manchester Tart

Classic, cheeky, and impossible not to love — that’s the Manchester Tart; its roots go back to Victorian times, when the city’s working-class families needed affordable treats; layers of short-crust pastry, raspberry jam, custard, and a sprinkle of coconut (sometimes topped with a cherry) make this a delicious dessert.
